About Town:

'Whitey' Boisclair: founder of a West Sacramento institution

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

Emile Rosarie Boisclair is the name his French-Canadian parents gave him, but everyone in West Sacramento knows him simply as Whitey.

"When I was growing up back in Rhode Island," explained Whitey, "some old bricklayer I knew began calling me Whitey for no particular good reason and somehow it stuck. At the time I didn't even have white hair, but the name ended up following me all the way out to California."

During the early years of World War Two, Whitey was stationed at nearby Camp Kohler and immediately fell in love with the Sacramento area.

"When the war was finally over," said Whitey, who also served overseas in New Guinea, "I came back to Sacramento and got a job working for National Ice and Cold Storage. Back in those days, lots of people still had ice delivered to their homes. If I remember right, a 25 pound block of ice cost 35 cents, and a 100 pound block was 75 cents. But I knew peddling ice was a job without much of a future and what I really wanted to do was be a sheet metal worker. Luckily, I got hired as an apprentice by a company called J.H. Mendenhall and by the 1950s I was pretty good at my trade."

The 1950s also saw the growth of Whitey's family. "I have four great children," explained Whitey. "There's Arthur, Debbie, Diana and Paula, and I'm proud to say they all still live in West Sacramento."

Whitey ended up settling down in West Sacramento because B.F. Williams, a friend of his who still lives here, bought a house in this area and encouraged Whitey to do likewise. "A brand new house only cost $12,500 back then," said Whitey, "and I purchased one over on Deerwood Street. Right from the start I liked West Sacramento and nothing has ever happened to change my mind."

What really changed Whitey's life, though, was a visit to Dr. Gaing Chan's local doctor's office in 1963. "I hadn't been feeling so good," explained Whitey. "Mostly it was a problem with my equilibrium, and I couldn't climb a ladder or do a number of other things my job required. Anyway, after Dr. Chan examined me, he told me I needed to change jobs. It's kind of hard to start all over again when you're 43 years old, but that's what I decided to do."

Against the advice of just about everyone he knew, Whitey borrowed $10,000 from his boss, another $10,000 from Wells Fargo Bank, and bought Pop's Frosty on the corner of Jefferson Boulevard and 13th Street. "The first day I was there," said Whitey, "I think we made all of $15. It was obvious we needed to change the menu and I also made sure we started using only genuine, fresh ingredients. I was very lucky that my first wife, Dorothy, was an outstanding cook. Plus Mrs. Valencia taught her how to make taco meat and chili the correct way. Anyway, it wasn't long at all before we had the place turned around and headed in the right direction."

> 'Not everyone in their 40s can start all over again like he did. He's earned his success.'
> -- Maxine Boisclair

Over the years, Whitey's Jolly Kone has become a West Sacramento landmark. "People come from as far away as Davis and Roseville to eat our burgers, fries, tacos and shakes," said Whitey with pride. "I have always tried to keep it simple. Serve quality, fresh food and give the customer the best service you can. The fact that three generations of my family have helped make the Jolly Kone what it is gives me a very good feeling."

Whitey finally retired from the fast food business about six years ago and his daughter, Paula, and her husband, Steve, now own and run Whitey's Jolly Kone. "Paula has a really great head for business," said Whitey, "and Steve is one of the hardest working people you'll ever meet. They're doing a great job, and a couple of my grandchildren are working at the Kone, too. It's nice to know that everything is in good hands."

Whitey is enjoying his retirement, but he still misses going to work each day. "Mostly I miss seeing the customers," said Whitey. "I'm a people person, and talking to the customers was always fun for me. I can't tell you how many wonderful people I met at work. And most of our customers are very loyal. Many of the same people have been coming to the Kone for years and years. I remember once a couple of them even came to my rescue when someone was trying to rob me. Having great customers always made going to work fun for me."

One of Whitey's fondest memories of the Jolly Kone is the day his second wife, Maxine, came in to get something to eat. "The minute I saw her," said Whitey, "I wanted to stretch out one of those long nets and pull her in to be my wife. She's been such an important part of my life and I wouldn't know what to do without her."

"The whole family is extremely proud of Whitey," said Maxine. "He's a very talented man who has accomplished a lot with his life. Not everyone in their 40s can start all over again like he did. He's earned his success and he's a great example of what hard work and dedication can accomplish."

If Whitey's health hadn't started giving him a few problems, he'd probably still be working at the Jolly Kone. "I had some bypass surgery," said Whitey, "and then some bladder cancer and a stroke, and all that slowed me down a bit. Plus my feet are shot because of all the years I spent standing up, but I'm actually feeling pretty good now.

"I definitely miss the place, but like I said earlier, it's in good hands with Paula and Steve, and I consider myself extremely lucky to have had the great life I've had."

Money Store sells building but signs 21-year lease

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

The Money Store has sold its headquarters building on the West Sacramento side of the Sacramento River for about $87 million, but has signed a 21-year lease to continue to occupy the building.

According to the Sacramento Bee, the deal is the Sacramento region's biggest office deal ever, and its second business real estate transaction of any kind.

The Money Store itself is being purchased by First Union Corp. of North Carolina -- a deal which provoked speculation on the future of the Money Store's pyramid-shaped headquarters building just north of the Tower Bridge. But the sale and lease-back arrangement with a subsidiary of the Bentley-Forbes Group, Inc., apparently ensures that the Money Store's corporate headquarters and its estimated 1,500 employees (of which most are already moved in) will not be leaving town anytime soon.

"I think it means little in terms of impact with the city," said Les Bowman of the West Sacramento Redevelopment Agency. "We knew when we started negotiating with them three years ago that they wanted to do this kind of transaction. It's a fairly routine thing for corporations to do to clean up their balance sheet and increase their ability to raise capital."

The Money Store, a lending company, is easily West Sacramento's largest office space, at 412,000 square feet and with an equally large adjacent garage. It has nearly as many employees as the city's largest employer, the U.S. Postal Service's distribution center on Industrial Blvd.

Bowman said the new Money Store building is nearly 100 percent occupied.

"They have eight of ten floors occupied," he reported. "They are expecting to receive certificates of occupancy for the remaining two floors in June.

The Bee reported that the only larger real estate deal on record in Sacramento was the $98.5 million sale of half the Arden Fair shopping center in 1993.

Bowman said that the Money Store will remain responsible for meeting its obligations to the city in the area's development.

The building's unique "pyramid" architecture has drawn a variety of reactions. Public comment among West Sacramentans has been largely positive for the tan or light gold-colored building, while most of the comment reported from among officials and citizens of Sacramento has been critical of the building, saying it overpowers the riverfront when it is viewed from Sacramento and Old Sacramento.

The building's sale was brokered by Eric Gragg of Bishop Hawke.

Missing driver found after spill

Area rescuers searched for victims after a van went into the Sacramento River on Saturday evening near Courtland (in southern Sacramento County).

But a woman called the Yolo County Sheriff's Department on Monday to say that her husband, was at home in Courtland and required medical attention. Sacramento County Sheriff's Dept. personnel then responded and met Bruce C. Coleman, 46, who said he had been the driver of the vehicle.

The Yolo County Sheriff/Coroner's office stated Monday that they did not yet have an explanation as to why Coleman did not contact officials prior to Monday. While there were believed to be no other victims, the California Highway Patrol continued its investigation into the accident.

The vehicle has not been recovered.

Yolo County to auction 11 horses impounded due to neglect

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Care to bid on a horse?

The Yolo County Sheriff's Department animal services unit will auction off 11 impounded horses on Tuesday, May 19, at 10 a.m. The auction will take place at the animal shelter, 41831 Gibson Rd. (near Road 102 in Woodland), and the animals may be viewed beginning at 9 a.m.

The horses were seized and impounded by the department last June. Included are two geldings and nine mares Ages are estimated as between two and 15 years.

Per state law, the minimum bid for the animals will be set "above the current slaughter price of the equine," and buyers will be required to declare that they are not purchasing the animals for slaughter or for resale for slaughter.

The horses were signed over to the county while their previous owner, an Esparto resident, was being prosecuted for their neglect.

"They were all between 100 and 300 pounds underweight," said Vicky Fletcher, Chief Animal Services Officer for Yolo County. "The complaint was for Section 597 of the penal code, for animal cruelty."

The horses were impounded last June. They have since received veterinary treatment from the UC Davis Veterinary Hospital, paid for by the county.

"They're all doing fine," said Fletcher.

Included among the mares are a couple of "two for one" deals -- one of the horses has recently given birth to a filly, and a second is "about to give birth at any moment," said Fletcher.

She said the horses did not come with registration papers but appear to be quarterhorses or similar.

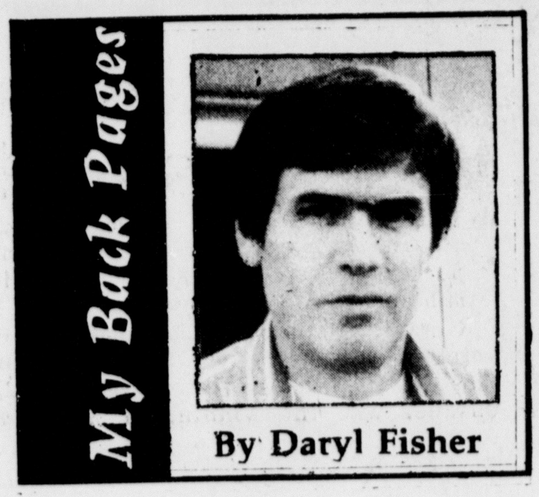
Newport hearing to be delayed—

City staff has recommended that a hearing scheduled for tomorrow on the Newport Estates subdivision be postponed. The planning commission is currently scheduled to discuss the project Thursday, but staff will request a postponement until May 21. Newport Estates is a planned subdivision in the Linden Road area of West Sacramento's Southport neighborhood.

Planners have told the planning commission that "a number of issues were raised at the (April 2) public hearing" on the project, and although "staff and the applicant have made significant progress toward resolving those issues," more time is needed.

Hints for those interested in successful parenting

Note: The following column is being reprinted by popular demand (actually, one person politely requested to see it again) – Editor.



Much to my surprise, a young mother whom my daughter baby-sits for recently accused me of knowing something about child rearing. "Actually," I told her, "when it comes to raising kids, I'm a lot like the guy who knows just enough about karate to walk into a country-western bar and get his butt kicked." She looked a little surprised by my comment, but managed to force a half-smile. "If the truth be known," I continued, "I'm afraid my kids are more or less raising me, not the other way around."

"But you must have a few basic principles or something which you use as a kind of guidepost for successful parenting, don't you?" she asked me.

"Oh, sure," I said. "I've got a whole bunch of those."

"Like what?"

"Well, let's see. I guess you'd have to put parental ignorance right up there at the top of my list."

"Excuse me?" she said, raising an eyebrow.

"To tell you the truth," I said, "if I actually knew all the things my kids were up to, I'd probably have a stroke. Mercifully, most of the time, all four of them manage to keep me pretty much in the dark."

"And that's okay with you?" she asked, surprised.

"Are you kidding? It's bliss!"

"But everything I've read says a good parent should be involved in every aspect of their child's life."

"Maybe so, but I've barely got the time to be involved in every aspect of my own life, much less theirs. Besides, space is everything to a kid, and grown-ups are always forgetting that."

"Well," she said, obviously disappointed with my lack of insight, "I guess we'll just have to agree to disagree on that one. What else do you think goes into being a good parent these days?"

I decided I better give a little more thought to my answer. "A good appreciation of bathroom humor is definitely a must," I finally said. "Especially in the area of flatulence."

"Flatulence?" she said. "You mean....you mean...."

"That's right," I interrupted, sensing she couldn't bring herself to say the word.

"You're kidding, right?"

"Nope. From the time they're two until they're about 14, almost all of their jokes revolve around bathroom humor. If you don't learn to laugh at it now and then, they start thinking they're not very funny, and the last thing you want on your hands is a kid who thinks he or she isn't very funny."

The young mother quickly changed the subject, made some small talk, and said she really had to be getting back to work. After we parted, however, I realized I had more to say on the subject that I had thought, are here are a few more good parenting hints I didn't have the time to pass along to her:

Set a definite bedtime for each and every child. Not only will your children be better rested and have more energy at school, but this will also do wonders for the sex life of their parents.

Invest heavily in video games. You'd be amazed at how much aggression a kid can get rid of by simply zapping weird looking little green things on a video screen.

If you have a teenage daughter who is too young to be dating, pretend you really, really like her boyfriend, and within a month or so, he will almost magically disappear.

If you have teenage sons, never bring one of their fights to an end by slugging the aggressor and yelling, "I don't want you hitting people!" It seems to give the wrong message.

Don't keep continually sitting your kids down to tell them all about the evils of taking drugs. Just do it once and calmly explain that if you ever catch them even so much as taking a single drag off a marijuana cigarette, they will be taken out in the backyard and shot.

Never take your children to a movie you 'think' they might enjoy. If you happen to be wrong, it will cost you a small fortune in cokes, popcorn, Bon-Bons, Mike & Ike jellybeans, Junior Mints, Jujy Fruits, and Red Vines.

Assign a specific list of household chores to each of your children. They will of course never get around to doing them, but the excuses they come up with are wonderfully entertaining and the lists you create will help you organize all the extra things you need to do after work and on the weekends.

And maybe most important of all, don't allow any of your children to have a pet which can't be sold at auction for a profit if things don't work out.

The NBA's second season heads into the second round of the playoffs.

The only upset was the rematch of the "rumble in the garden" between the Knicks and the Miami Heat. Alonso Mourning, Miami's center, was suspended for fighting with New York's Larry Johnson in game four of their best-of-five series. Mourning's lack of judgment in the final 1.4 seconds of the game cost the Miami Heat and their fans the opportunity to meet with the Indiana Pacers.

The Pacers had an easy time with Cleveland and will handle New York four games to two.

The Bulls will win their series over Charlotte 4-1.

The Bulls and the Pacers will meet in the Eastern Conference final. Look out, Bulls!

The Western Conference has four great teams remaining in the hunt to win the NBA's championship. The San Antonio Spurs, led by the Twin Towers (Duncan and Robinson) will upset Utah 4-3 in their best-of-seven series.

The Lakers will have their hands full with Seattle, but Gary Payton will lead the Sonics to the conference final. Seattle wins this series, four games to three.

Next week, I'll have my championship picks!

Boxing returns to Sacramento on Saturday, May 9, at 6 p.m. The main event will feature Jose Luis Lopez (40-3-2, 31 KOs) against Puerto Rico's Sammy Fuentes (34-17, 28 KOs). The Olympic sensation Fernando Vargas (11-0 with 11 KOs) will tangle with Eddie Hall (27-12, 13 KOs) and West Sac's Willie Jorrin (20-0, 12 KOs) will meet Mexico's Oscar Salas (27-9-2, 17 KOs) in semi-main event ten round bouts.

Tickets are priced at $22, $32 and $42, and can be purchased at El Michoacano Restaurant at 900 Jefferson Blvd.

Pro-Venture Travel has a bus trip planned on Sat., May 16, to San Jose for a Pro Soccer doubleheader. The San Jose Clash will play the Miami Fusion at 5:30 p.m., followed by the USA World Cup Soccer team against Macedonia. The cost is $40 per person and includes the round-trip bus ride, $21 game ticket, BBQ tailgate party, Clash T-shirt, and free admission before the game to the Soccer Celebration theme park. RC tennis posts two more wins

From River City High School

The Golden Empire League tennis season is shaping up as two separate races -- one for the top spot and the league championship banner, and the other for fourth place. In the first group, River City, Colfax, and Lindhurst are battling for the league title. In the second group, Golden Sierra, Marysville and Lincoln are trying to avoid the league's basement. Last week River City played a pair of matches against two teams from that second group and crushed both Golden Sierra on the road and Marysville at home by the score of 9 to 0. The wins improved RC to 7-0 in league play and 19-1 overall.

Among the week's highlights were the continued success of the team's number one singles players Sarom Phoung and Douangchanh Lattasima. It seems every GEL team has a tough #1 boys singles player and Phoung had a pair of long, exhausting matches last week against Golden Sierra's James Lancaster and Marysville's Beau Powell. Phoung defeated Lancaster 3-6, 6-0, 7-6, fighting off four match points against him on Lancaster's serve. Then he battled Powell, the top ranked boy in the entire league, for nearly two and-a-half hours before prevailing 7-6, 6-7, 6-4. Raider Coach Dave Brooks offered these words of praise for his number one player, "I told Sarom after the Marysville match that I just love coaching him. He plays with so much heart and never gives up, as he demonstrated against Lancaster. He's such a good example for his teammates about work ethic and character."

On the girls side, fellow senior Lattasima continued her dominance in league with a pair of 6-0, 6-0 victories. Her win at Golden Sierra came so quickly that the Grizzlies' coach thought she had played just one set and was taking a breather before resuming the match. She has not lost a single set in GEL play this season.

Other impressive outings were turned in by the boys doubles teams. In the number one position, juniors Aaron Potnick and Phoungeun Souvannaphoungeun remained unbeaten in league action with a pair of 10-2 wins. At number two, the newly formed duo of sophomores Prak Pich and Huy Truong dropped only six games in their two victories.

This week the Raiders host Colfax in a first place showdown before travelling to winless Lincoln tomorrow.

OUT ON A LIMB by GARY KOPERVAS

THE SPATS by JEFF PICKERING

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Spare a can of soup this Saturday?

Remember Cliff Clavin, the mailman character on the old "Cheers" television show? Remember how he dreaded the day when Sears catalogs came out?

This Saturday is another annual event that must fill mail carriers with, if not dread, at least some mixed feelings. Saturday is the annual food drive hosted by the National Association of Letter Carriers, the U.S. Post Office, the AFL-CIO, United Way and Campbell Soup Company.

Residents are asked to leave out non-perishable food donations for their mail carrier to pick up on Saturday. The food will be collected and distributed among area food closets for the needy.

When the event started in 1991, reports the postal service, a pilot drive in ten cities brought in 584,000 pounds of food. Last year, the Sacramento area alone collected nearly the same amount.

While collecting this kind of tonnage must be a bit of a burden to the letter carriers (though perhaps not as bad as Sears catalogue day), it surely is appreciated by those hungry people who receive the food.

This Saturday's mail represents an excellent way to help out our neighbors. And no stamps are necessary to "mail" your donation!

Daughter's memories of a special mom on Mother's Day

Allison Miller is a West Sacramento resident and a student at River City High School.

By Allison Miller

Have you ever had a best friend who was there for you in good and bad times? Mine was my mom!

When I was a young girl, I was very active in roller-skating. Even though this took up a lot of time, effort and money, my parents were my number one support system. They were at every competition, and I still remember my mom yelling "Go, Allison!" as I went up to receive my first trophy. Not only did she cry when I won, she would cry for me when I lost. She would always try to cheer me up by telling me that there was always a next time. My dad would video tape all of my performances and they were both so proud.

As I got older, my mom was always there for me, but being a typical teenager I did not think much about it, and took her for granted. For example, it was the summer of my freshman year in high school, and we had just moved to another city. I really wanted to be a cheerleader and my mom knew that. She went out of her way to find out the dates and times of the tryouts. She would pick me up from school and drive me to the cheerleading clinic, which lasted for two weeks. I never stopped to think what a hardship this was on her, since she worked full time, yet she never complained about the amount of time it took. I remember the day of tryouts and how nervous I was. Mom was so sure I would make it, that she had no doubts whatsoever. To my surprise, but not to my mother's, I made the cheerleading squad. I called her as soon as I got out of the gym and she screamed with happiness.

That was two years ago, and a lot has happened since then. The Christmas of my freshman year, my mom was diagnosed with ovarian cancer, but she did not tell us until after the holidays so my sister and I could have a nice Christmas. That is just the way my mom was. Always putting others' needs in front of her own.

My mom had seven months of chemotherapy and after that she lost weight and her hair and did not look like my mom anymore. Through these months, I was in a state of denial and could not believe this had happened to my mom and our family. She kept a sense of hope about her chance at surviving and never stopped being a mom or a wife. Her family was always the most important thing in her life.

Toward the end of her chemotherapy she decided to go in the hospital for a stem cell treatment so she could have a chance to live cancer-free. I still remember the morning she came into my bedroom before she left for the hospital to give me a hug and tell me she loved me. She was crying and I told her, "Don't worry, you will be all right." But something tragically went wrong and she passed away while in the hospital. I remember going into her hospital room and thinking something just wasn't right. As I looked around, I knew what it was. . . my mom was going to die and I couldn't do anything about it. She had a heart attack from all of the chemotherapy and she was on life support until the doctors told us that we should let her go, that she was not going to wake up. I never got to say good bye to my mom, give her a hug or tell her how much I loved her before she was gone.

I am almost through with my sophomore year at River City High School and my life has changed drastically. I made cheerleader again, but mom wasn't there to say "Go Allison". . . nor will she be there when I get my driver's license, when I go to a prom, when I graduate or when I start a family.

I know my mom is watching over me as I can feel her presence. I talk to her every night before I go to bed. I hope she can hear me when I tell her how much I miss her and how sorry I am that I didn't appreciate her while she was here. I know I will see her again but all I can do for now is keep her memory alive and live my life the way she wanted me to live it.

The reason I wrote this is not for people to feel sorry for me, but to help others realize how special moms really are. I hope whoever reads this will realize that things can happen quickly and unexpectedly to the best of people and we should take the time today to tell our loved ones how much we love them.

Newport hearing to be delayed

My letter to the editor of two weeks ago, regarding concerns with the Newport Estates subdivision application, asked for your support at the May 7 Planning Commission meeting. Thanks, school activists!

I would like to thank all the volunteers who made the Kindergarten class size reduction petition a success. I presented the petition to the W.U.S.D. Board of Education at their regularly scheduled meeting on Tuesday, April 28. The petition was, I feel, well received by the Board. The petitions totaled, over 250 total signatures, over 140 signatures of parents and children in W.U.S.D. in Fall 1998, and over 200 registered voters!

There are many named and unnamed people who were responsible for the successful collection of the signatures for this petition. The people I would like to directly thank include Nancy Wilber, Allison Reynolds, Nora Soares, Shawnecee Morgan, and Jane Machschefes. I would also like to thank the various day care providers and others who joined the effort. Without your help this petition would have failed.

In the end my hope is for reduced Kindergarten classes this Fall, and for the continuing improvement of our education system. We've come a ways, we have a long ways to go.

Again, thanks to all the named and unnamed volunteers for this petition drive.

Vote for Ayala

"Yolo County School districts reported that the Yolo County Office of Education is unresponsive to their inquiries. The school districts characterized their relationship with the Yolo County Office of Education as adversarial." This and many more such items as this is what the June 30, 1997 Yolo County Grand Jury found wit the Yolo County Superintendent of Schools office. On June 2 the citizens of Yolo County have an opportunity to change the leadership that has been missing with the five local school districts in Yolo County.

Dr. Jorge Ayala with over 22 years of service to Yolo County schools will bring a positive change to work with local schools. His idea of going to the citizens and educators to bring closure to this Grand Jury report is critical for all county students. He is being supported by current school district superintendents of Washington, Woodland, and Esparto. Washington Unified School board members Irene Eklund, Pat Flint, and Hal Williams and many more Yolo County school board members are supporting Dr. Ayala as the person that can bring positive change.

Dr. Ayala has been an outstanding educator and leader countywide. He has over 10 years of being chairperson of the Western Association of Schools and Colleges Accreditation, a committee that studies and recommends effective change for schools.

As an educator I ask for your support to vote with me on June 2, Dr. Ayala for Yolo County Superintendent of Schools.
